Definitions & Procedures

Money Laundering

Money laundering is a generic term used to describe any process that conceals the origin or derivation of the proceeds of crime so that the proceeds appear to be derived from a legitimate source.

Money laundering is sometimes wrongly regarded as an activity that is associated only with organized crime and drug trafficking. It occurs whenever any person deals with another person's direct or indirect benefit from crime.

Money laundering is a crime that is most often associated with banking and money remittance services. Whilst banks are often an essential part of successful laundering schemes, the financial and related services that Licensees offer are also vulnerable to abuse by money launderers.

Additional Due Diligence measures for financial institutions

We are undertaking following additional due diligence measures while establishing and maintaining correspondent relationships:

- ❖ Obtaining sufficient information about a respondent company to avoid any relationships with "shell-banks";
- ❖ Determining from publicly available sources of information the reputation of a respondent company including whether it has been subject to a money laundering or terrorist financing investigation or other regulatory action;
- ❖ Assessing the respondent institution's anti-money laundering and terrorist financing controls on a periodic basis.
